When did you make this "agreement" with me???

I have reminded you, time and again, that I have no time ever for any fake things, specially when they happen to be in the human form.

So please just get on with whatever agenda you have in hand and just in your own steam.

You know it and quite a few others on this forum know when I had offered (it was my offer, not some agreement with you) that test.

Why do you so constantly contradict yourself?

If only you start reading the posts (including your own) before posting again, then maybe, just maybe, we can have an intelligent conversation.

Ask someone else what "I had agreed" means if you are not familiar with good class English. Don't hark for my attention, I have told you I have no time for you at all.

Who did you agree with? When you agree with someone, that means both sides decide to do the same thing, since I didnt then you did not agree, you offered.

Im not seeking attention from you, I actually started a thread ("Sawtul vs Whisper") to stop you from posting nonsense on my other threads but sadly that thread was closed...

Getting back to the topic, here's again another reports which once again confirms my prediction:

<http://www.crooksandliars.com/2007/08/28/the-us-is-fighting-iraqi-government/>

There's a sinister reason why some journalists believe the surge is having a small effect in Iraq militarily. It's because we're actually fighting against the government we helped create. This is sick.

BLITZER: What did you think of what we heard from General Odierno, suggesting that some progress, in fact, is being achieved on the battlefield against Al Qaida in Iraq and other elements there?

Because the critics, a lot of critics, are suggesting, yes, there may be some progress, but it won't make much difference in the long run, as long as that sectarian rift that exists between the Sunni, the Shia and the Kurds continues to exist.

WARE: Yes, well, General Ray Odierno very much has his finger on the pulse of this war, and his assessment is entirely correct.

Yes, there has been some stabilization, some spectacular examples, like in al-Anbar province. Yes, it's forced changes in the type of violence that we're seeing here.

But Iraqi innocents are still dying in their hundreds and thousands every month. And what we're failing to address is how we achieving these successes in bringing down the violence is by cutting a deal with the tribes, the Baathists and the Sunni insurgents. It's by creating Sunni militias to counteract the government's own militias and the Iranian-backed militias. That's bound to have long-term consequences.

In many ways, part of what's being achieved is because America is turning somewhat, despite its rhetoric, against this government, fostering Sunni militias, questioning the role of this government, questioning whether it can actually perform.

And we Ambassador Crocker, just the other day, say that if Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki does not deliver, then American support is not at the end of a blank check. So he's threatening the prime minister.

Remember that my prediction was:

"But just incase the Sunni resistance continues to stand tall, they are going to have to stay content with a pro-American, yet "religious" Shiah Government (So long as Iran is allied to them, and so long as Iran is seen as a religious anti-American Government, the New Iraqi Government could also hope to be portrayed as anti-American one day. In other words they can later pretend to have sided with Iran rather than the USA, when in reality they have always been working with both Iran and the USA)."

Bismillahirrahmaanerrahim

Just a few minutes ago, Iran's IRINN (news channel) was reporting on the situation in Iraq and guess what...

they actually said that Bush is against the New Iraqi Government!!!

They said "Bush does not really support Maliki, peace and security"!!!

It went on to say that Bush actually supports the resistance and the US is trying to incite the Sunnis against the Shiah Government!

I couldn't help but laugh when I heard this - not only because this was exactly what I predicted would happen - but also because they equated Maliki's Government with PEACE AND SECURITY, despite the fact that the New Iraqi Government under Maliki has been responsible for torturing to death thousands of Iraqis who were suspected of defending their country against the occupation.

Maliki's Government also supports and is backed by the Shiah Death squads such as the Badr Brigade who go around killing anyone who even has a Sunni name!!!

Anyway, this is all part of their plan as I explained on this thread as well as the "Real Reason US invaded Iraq" thread. Iran is trying to make excuses for their backing of the New Iraqi Government despite the fact that the Government was created, supported, armed, trained and protected by the USA which they themselves call "the Great Satan"!!!

They are trying to find an excuse so they would not be seen as America's helpers, as they want everyone to think that Iran is America's biggest enemy, so they made up this whole story - which I KNEW they were going to say since long ago.

Supreme Leader lauds great achievements of Iraqi people

The Supreme Leader expressed pleasure with establishment of democratic government in Iraq and taking shape of constitutional organs in the country.

The Supreme Leader praised the great achievements of the Iraqi people and described them as blessings of the Almighty.

Ayatollah Khamenei honored the decisive leadership of venerable leader of Iraq (Grand Ayatollah Ali Sistani) and said that Iraqi people are expected to reinforce national solidarity and religious unity to remove security problems in Iraq.

The Supreme Leader underscored the need for withdrawal of occupation forces from Iraq as pre-requisite for national security and successful hand-over of the state affairs to Iraqi forces themselves.

Source: Islamic Republic (of Iran) News Agency

Link:http://www2.irna.ir/en/news/view/line-22/06062075201625_06.htm

I just quoted the above as more confirmation of what I've been saying.

First of all, notice Khamenehi refers to the new Iraqi Government which the United States has made in Iraq as the "blessing of the Almighty"!!!

He then says the "security problems" in Iraq must be removed and the "Iraqi forces" (who are trained, armed and controled by the Americans) should take over.

So he is clearly saying that the puppet Government is Islamic (in fact, a "blessing of the Almighty") and that the "security problems" (by which he means the Iraqi resistance) must be destroyed.

Note: This is in connection to my posts on page 1 of this thread.

I propose, we must set up have a Loony Bin Section in Islamicity and invite all the frauds and other obsessive loonies to post in that section instead of infecting the whole site.

I don't mind American agents, it's the Israeli agents and agenda promoters I detest.
